BASTIA, JUNE 9.

THE French troops which had marched under the command of Count de Marbœuf againſt the Corſicans beyond the mountains, have had a bloody action with thoſe people, who unexpectedly attacked them at Fiumalto, between Caſinca and La Tavagna. It is ſaid, that the French were obliged to retire, with the loſs of a great number of ſoldiers killed and wounded.

We are informed that the cavalry have ſeized ſeveral of the mountaineers, and have put them to death.

LONDON, JULY 15.

Tranſlation of a letter from Paris.

"Within theſe two hours I have received the copy of our great loſs in the late bloody engagement in Corſica. Marbœuf acted in the late unhappy action like a prudent, cautious, conſummate officer: yet the natural ſituation of the country, the deep ravines between Caſinca and La Tavagna, made it impoſſible for the braveſt and beſt diſciplined troops to reſiſt the barbarous ferocity of the natives; therefore the French failed in the attack, but made their retreat in good order. No human wiſdom could prevent the enemy taking the baggage and military cheſt at Fiumalto; for they deſcended the ſide of a vaſt mountain, that ſeemed inacceſſible, with ſuch a multitude, that they reſembled a rapid torrent after a thunder ſtorm, ruſhing over every obſtacle with a furious impetuoſity. The following is the return of the killed and wounded.

"Regiment Dauphine, officers killed 7, wounded 16; rank and file, killed 99, wounded 261.—Regiment Berry, officers killed 11, wounded 25; rank and file, killed 71, wounded 149. Regiment Alſace, three battalions, officers killed 31, wounded 50, rank and file, killed 179, wounded 296.—Royal Rouſſillon, officers killed 5, wounded 11; rank and file, killed 56, wounded 185.—Regiment Bourgogne, officers killed 13, wounded 29; rank and file, killed 42, wounded 79.—Regiment Royal Italien, officers killed 3, wounded 7; rank and file, killed 9, wounded 41.—Regiment Caſtella, officers killed 6, wounded 29; rank and file, killed 31, wounded 129.—Regiment Bulkeley, officers killed 9, wounded 17; rank and file, killed 47, wounded 109.—Cavalry, officers killed 11, wounded 21; rank and file, killed 41, wounded 73. Seven battalions were left in garriſon. The numbers miſſing ſince the general attack are not included, nor thoſe taken priſoners in the ſurprize of the baggage, who, we fear, have not experienced much politeneſs from the ſavages."

AUGUST 16.

Tranſlation of a letter from Leghorn, dated July 19, to an Italian Merchant in London,

"Yeſterday landed here, from three Sardinian felucas, a deputation from the free Corſicans, of ſeven perſons, with their attendants and baggage, who ſet out at ſun-riſe this morning for Florence, and are immediately to proceed for Vienna, with propoſals to the Emperor to guaranty their treaty with the Grand Duke, whom they are ready immediately to declare King, and Hereditary Sovereign of all Corſica, with an annual tribute of eight hundred thouſand ſequins, to be levied and collected in whatever manner the General Aſſembly of the deputies of the different pieves ſhall think proper. The Corſicans engage to ſupport a conſtant body of regular troops, of ſix thouſand men, to be annually recruited from their militia, which is to conſiſt of the male inhabitants of the whole kingdom from the age of twenty to forty years, to be ſupplied with arms and ammunition at the expence of each pieve; that their Sovereign the Grand Duke ſhall maintain in Corſica, nine battalions of infantry, three troops of Huſſars, a corps of artillery of three hundred and men, with three trains of light Artillery; and that this military force ſhall be landed in Corſica within four months after the ſigning the treaty, which is acceded to even by all the Corſicans, now expoſed to the barbarity of the French troops, of whom they are poſitive they have deſtroyed ſeven thouſand within the laſt nine months. Many they have deſtroyed by poiſoning the wells and rivulets that ſupply their garriſons, their markſmen conſtantly kill the French officers; their horſes are always hamſtrung during the night, when they are at graſs; the hay ground is regularly burnt up by their countrymen; their bridges of communication are no ſooner finiſhed than blown up; their new roads are immediately rendered impaſſable by a ſmall kind of mine, called a fougaſſe, in which work the Corſican peaſants are very expert; for twenty of them can, in one night, deſtroy what has employed a French battalion ſix weeks with infinite labour. They now declare, from the late examples of French courage in their glorious victory over the French army, they have not the leaſt dread of one hundred French battalions. Nothing but the ſavage barbarity of the French in ſtabbing the Corſican children, raviſhing and then hanging their women, putting their countrymen to the torture, and butchering them on the rack, marks of inhumanity unknown and unexperienced in any age, are, they truſt, a ſufficient apology with mankind for uſing ſome retaliation upon the unprovoked butchers of their infants, their parents, their wives, and themſelves; will make them innocent of any accuſation of being an unjuſt enemy, and ſufficiently excuſe their manner of ſelf defence."
